

Building a LEGACY

—THE ANSON PHELPS SOCIETY

Financial and Estate Planning Ideas for Friends of Phelps Memorial Hospital Center

Fall 2010

Planning Today for a Better Tomorrow

Have you made plans for the rest of the week? For the next month? For the next year? As we look further into the future, planning our lives naturally becomes more challenging. This is one reason many people put off making long-term plans to help assure greater financial security for themselves and their loved ones.

The same can also be said for many of the organizations and institutions like ours that furnish vital services to our society. Phelps created the Anson Phelps Society to assure the availability of the resources necessary to fulfill our mission in the coming years. But this can only happen with the help of the wonderful people who make thoughtful provisions each year for the future of our work at Phelps.

We are pleased to offer the information in this newsletter as a service to those who would like to make a “gift of a lifetime” to Phelps Memorial Hospital Center after first providing for their loved ones.

Not to plan is to plan

Estate and financial plans can easily get “lost in the shuffle” and all too often be put off until it is too late. In the absence of a valid will and/or other basic provisions, state laws will automatically distribute your property among relatives without regard to what your wishes may have been.

In this issue of Building a Legacy we share some simple guidelines for taking charge of the planning process for your benefit and for the well-being of your family and other loved ones.

Contact your advisors for more information. And return the enclosed reply card for our helpful booklet, at no obligation.

INSIDE THIS ISSUE

- Wills form the foundation of plans
- Leaving a legacy while providing for heirs
- The Anson Phelps Society

At the time of printing this issue of Building a Legacy, Congress was still debating the estate tax issue. Please check with your advisors or call us for an update.

A Planning Checklist

- Have you given serious thought to your long-term financial arrangements?
- Do your plans take into account changes in the makeup of your family?
- Have you considered the impact of change in the value of your assets since your last review?
- Are you aware of what your estate tax liability might be and how such taxes will have to be paid?
- Are those who assisted you in the past still able to help carry out your wishes?

If you answered no to any question, you may need a review.

Tax Tips

- The “sunset” provision of the 2001 Tax Act is likely to affect virtually every taxpayer. Gift, estate, and financial plans should be reviewed with your professional advisor.
- Retirement accounts may be taxed more than other assets.
- Unlimited amounts may be left to a spouse tax free.
- Full tax rates apply at the death of the surviving spouse in 2011.
- There is no limit to the amount deductible from federal estate tax for charitable gifts.
- It is possible to provide for loved ones, make charitable gifts, and reduce or eliminate estate taxes.

Your Will . . . the First Step in the Planning Process

As in the case of other important projects, beginning the estate planning process with the correct tools in mind can make all the difference in the outcome. Experts frequently recommend beginning with a will, the planning vehicle that typically forms the basis of even the most complex estate plans.

Exercise your rights

In a society where private ownership of property is allowed and encouraged, the right to decide who should eventually receive your property is a vitally important responsibility.

The last will and testament has been carefully designed over centuries to be a primary vehicle for use in directing future disposition of your property.

A flexible instrument

Wills are extremely flexible. Through your will you can provide others with particular sums of money, certain properties, or percentages of your estate. You can mix methods as well. For example, you may choose to leave exact amounts to certain heirs while directing that others split the remainder of your assets in percentages you determine.

Coordinate with other plans

Remember that your will by itself may not determine who will receive many of your assets. One of the biggest mistakes made is to ignore the impact of other ways to distribute property to heirs.

To illustrate, if you own real estate jointly with another person, your will may have little or no effect on who will ultimately own the property. The same is true for proceeds from life insurance policies and retirement plans. A beneficiary designation completed years ago could determine who receives the benefits, not the terms of your current will.

For this reason and others, you should only undertake revision of your will with competent advice in connection with a thorough review of all of your assets and the forms in which they are held.

Reducing the Cost of Probate

Here are a few ways to help accelerate the distribution of property while minimizing expenses associated with the probate process:

- Have a valid, up-to-date will. Make sure your executor (in some states known as a “personal representative”) is still capable and willing to serve.
- Consider a living trust. Many people have found living trusts to be a welcome addition to their plans. Your attorney, trust officer, or other qualified professional advisor can provide more information about the usefulness of such trusts for you.
- Carefully review the beneficiaries of your life insurance policy(ies) and retirement plans. Make certain the people you named to receive funds still reflect your wishes. Talk to your life insurance professional, your employer’s employee benefits manager, or others who may manage your retirement plans.
- Review joint ownership. Joint ownership of real estate, bank accounts, brokerage accounts, and certain other types of property can be a good way to minimize the delays and fees associated with probate. But beware of overuse of joint ownership, especially if you believe your estate may be subject to tax.

Who Will Act for You?

A power of attorney can name the person or persons you wish to handle your financial affairs should you be unable to do so, or if you simply prefer that others manage your assets.

A living will can record your wishes about extraordinary medical care and life-support measures.

Changing With the Times

Whether you realize it or not, your estate plans may have changed.

Changes in your family, your charitable priorities, state or federal estate tax law, or the performance of the economy can make it necessary to revise even the most well-considered plans. Expansive provisions of the 2001 Tax Act are one reason every estate plan should be reviewed.

Importance of regular updates

Routine reviews of your estate plans with your attorney and other advisors are the best way to make sure your arrangements keep up with the times. For example, a will drawn 10 or 15 years ago may include provisions suited to a smaller estate. Additionally, the value of a home, stocks, bonds, and other assets may have changed if you have owned them for a long period of time. This could call for important changes in your will and other estate plans.

Assets can drop in value as well. This can be another reason to make certain that your wishes are still reflected in light of current conditions.

Do These Apply?

- Family changes
- A move to another state
- Tax law changes since last review
- A change in the value of your assets

A memorial can serve as an enduring and loving tribute to one or more individuals while contributing to the benefit of future generations.

Leaving a Legacy While Providing for Heirs

Charitable gifts included as part of your long-range estate and financial planning can offer a wonderful way to provide lasting support for organizations and institutions that will survive well into the future. It can be possible to make a “gift of a lifetime” to Phelps Memorial Hospital Center while possibly minimizing taxes and settlement costs and conserving more of your estate for loved ones. Some points to remember:

- Memorial gifts are often received through an estate. A memorial can serve as an enduring and loving tribute to one or more individuals while contributing to the benefit of future generations.
- Estate gifts can be funded with cash, securities, real estate, or other property.
- A gift of all or a portion of the “residue” of your estate refers to property remaining after all distributions to family and others have been satisfied.

- Gifts may be stated in terms of a percentage of an estate, thereby allowing gifts to increase or decrease depending on the value of the assets remaining.
- Increasingly popular gift planning tools enable you to make a meaningful gift while enjoying increased income (for life or another period of time you determine), tax savings, and other benefits.

We will be pleased to provide more information to you and your advisors concerning ways you can provide a lasting legacy while preserving financial security for you and your loved ones.

The Anson Phelps Society

For those who have included Phelps Memorial Hospital Center in their estate plans

Anson Phelps, for whom our Hospital was named, was an extraordinary person and a philanthropist. He and his wife, Jane, lived in a mansion overlooking the Hudson River, on what is now the Phelps campus.

The Anson Phelps Society was created to honor the spirit of Anson Phelps. Anson Phelps Society members are a special group of people who, by including Phelps in their estate plans, demonstrate their understanding of the importance of philanthropy and legacy gifts. These gifts help to ensure our mission to provide outstanding healthcare to our community - today and in the future. Members of the Anson Phelps Society are invited to the President's Reception each year and will receive our Society newsletters.

If you would like to include, or have already included, Phelps Memorial Hospital Center in your estate plan, please contact Janet Pollack, Major Gifts Officer, at (914) 366-3108, or jpollack@pmhc.us, or return the enclosed card.
